

I am not in favor of changing the present rules regarding transmission bandwidth any more than I would ask someone in a crowded room speaking in a loud voice to be quiet so that I could carry on my own private conversation. The sensible thing to do is simply move to a quieter location. It seems to me that's why they put that big tuning knob on the front of the transceiver in the first place. Apparently, the petitioner's brains and the tuning dial are dysfunctional? Give me a break!!
